Pastor's Ponderings

Ten Ways to LOVE

1. Listen without interrupting. (Proverbs 18)
2. Speak without accusing. (James 1:9)
3. Give without sparing. (Proverbs 21:26)
4. Pray without ceasing. (Colossians 1:9)
5. Answer without arguing. (Proverbs 17:1)
6. Share without pretending. (Ephesians 4:15)
7. Enjoy without complaint. (Philippians 2:14)
8. Trust without wavering. (1 Corinthians 13:7)
9. Prove without punishing. (Colossians 2:15)
10. Promise without forgetting. (Proverbs 13:17)

I have this on my bulletin board in my TOL office to remind me to LOVE, that LOVE takes effort, and LOVE can be shown in many different ways. This list doesn't include forgiving, sacrificing, selflessness and other values. However, it is a reminder to me that loving the way God LOVES, an "AGAPE" LOVE, is a selfless, full-time pursuit that encompasses our whole lives as we interact with God's earth, creatures, and fellow humans.

As we enter the month of Thanksgiving, I am drawn to thank God for God's selfless and steadfast LOVE for us, exhibited in the LOVE Jesus showed from the Cross and through his ministry. I am thankful for all who have taught and shown me this kind of LOVE. I am encouraged that we, as we continue to share God's AGAPE LOVE, can change the world.

In Christ's LOVE I remain,

Kelly's Thoughts on Retreat 2025

Beautiful weather, peaceful surroundings, exceptional company and a topic we can all relate to.

The theme this year was

"Do you hear what I hear?" Listening and communicating with others is something we can all tweak and be better at. We had discussions, memory activities, group sessions, fun and games, and crafts! With the Holy Spirit by our side, we shared our thoughts and feelings; we laughed and sometimes we cried. The weekend left me with a better sense of who I am and who I want to be.

Each year I think "this was the best year ever!" But now I'm believing that it's every year—and there have been 11 retreats! That's how amazing these weekends are, thanks to Charlie Schmidtke, who continues to teach and inspire us each and every year.

Looking forward to Retreat 2026 – October 2, 3, 4
Mark your calendars and join us!

ELCA Prayer Ventures, November 2017/2018*

- † All Saints Day Today, we remember our sisters and brothers in Christ who have gone before us – loved ones, friends, saints and martyrs – and offer thanks and respect for how they have influenced and enriched our lives and faith.
- † Pray for those who are in mourning and despair over the loss of a loved one, family member, friend or neighbor, and ask the Holy Spirit to help us surround them with support, understanding and the hope we have through Jesus' victory over death and the promise of eternal life.
- † Remember in prayer immigrants and refugees fleeing violence and dire circumstances to seek safety, peace and new opportunities; pray for those who, in spite of the personal risks and daunting challenges they face, return home with hope and determination to rebuild their lives and communities.
- † Pray we are grateful, responsible and generous stewards with everything God has entrusted to our care for the well-being of our neighbor and the sake of the world.
- † Pray for doctors, nurses, staff, health educators, missionaries and chaplains serving in faith-based hospitals, clinics, and places of care and healing throughout the world.
- † Give thanks that our church believes that cultural, ethnic and racial differences should be seen and celebrated as what God intends them to be - blessings rather than means of oppression and discrimination - and pray for courage and self-reflection to face and change the uncomfortable things within ourselves, culture and society that selectively cause suffering and harm of others.
- † We pray we treat one another, especially people living in the margins of society or in contexts removed from our daily experience of life, with the same love, concern and mercy God has shown us.
- † Thanksgiving Day God is good, loving and generous, providing abundantly for humankind and all living things. Give thanks for the blessings that sustain us, and pray we are generous in sharing our resources, shelter, food, care and hospitality with our neighbor.
- † Lift up in prayer people who serve a role in planting, tending, growing, harvesting, transporting and preparing the food that sustains us and gives us joy, and pray for renewed commitment to doing everything possible to eliminate hunger in the world.

My Musings by Diane Schmidtke

Stay Gold...

The last line of a famous Robert Burns poem says
“Nothing gold can stay.”

Gold is a metaphor for perfection, purity, innocence, life...

Since I’m writing this on the first day of autumn, it rings true. I watch the leaves on the trees and bushes in my neighborhood slowly lose their green and morph into red and orange, bronze and yellow as they fall. All of them are lovely, but nothing is permanent; nothing/no one stays forever...

We just saw “The Outsiders” at Shea’s. I had read the book in college for a children’s literature course. I can’t say I looked forward to seeing teenage angst displayed through song and dance, but we have season tickets so off we went. I groaned inwardly as droves of teens entered the theatre, slurping on their drinks and chomping on their popcorn, giggling and goofy. Don’t get me wrong: I love kids of all ages, but I pictured a loud, disruptive audience with rock concert behavior.

Well, I’m happy to say I was wrong on all counts! The musical was performed to perfection with great acting, singing and amazing choreography, lighting and timing. There was not a sound while the “teens” on stage played out their struggles. There was joyous response when each song ended.

At one point near the end as Ponyboy and Johnny (lead characters) were in hiding, Johnny recited the Robert Burns poem in its entirety. Later, in a pivotal scene, he encouraged his best friend to “stay gold” despite their difficult lives.

I need this reminder. It circles around to carpe diem, seizing the day, savoring the good moments as they come and then fade in the ever-flowing cycle of life. It again teaches me to withhold judgment, to be open to the gift of each day, to remember that the unpleasant, troubling, upsetting things roll on.

In country singer Gary Allan’s words, “Every storm runs out of rain.”

A reminder to:
“Stay Gold”...

Study Notes: "Armenian Church"

Part III: Armenian Church

Like the Roman Catholic Church and the Anglican Church, the Armenians believe that all of their priests remain in what is called the Apostolic Succession, since Nathaniel and Jude were apostles and all of the priests in Armenia have been ordained in a continuous succession from them. They had representatives at the Council of Nicaea, which produced the Nicene Creed and established the Canon of books for the bible. Political differences finally led to Armenia splitting from the Roman Church. In addition to the political split, there is one major theological split between the Roman Catholic Church and the Armenian Church. For Catholics and Lutherans Jesus is both Man and God, equally. For the Armenians there is only One Incarnate nature of Jesus. His one nature includes both a divine and a human self. This split is far more consequential for the Armenians than it may appear on the surface to us. It is unclear what influence Nathaniel, or Jude, had on the Armenian belief in Jesus' nature.

Over 93% of Christians in Armenia belong to the Armenian Apostolic Church, which is in communion only with the churches comprising Oriental Orthodoxy—of which it is itself a member. Ninety-eight percent of the population of Armenia itself is Christian and over 98% of the population is Armenian. It is a very homogenous country. The Oriental Orthodox Churches are Eastern Christian churches adhering to Miaphysite Christology (will talk about this later), with approximately 60 million members worldwide.

As some of the oldest religious institutions in the world, the Oriental Orthodox Churches have played a prominent role in the history and culture of Armenia, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Sudan, Western Asia and India. Their bishops are considered equal to the Roman Catholic clergy by virtue of episcopal ordination. Their doctrines recognize the validity of only the first three ecumenical councils (Nicaea, 325; Constantinople, 381; and Ephesus, 431). They rejected the Council of Chalcedon in 451 and all subsequent councils.

The Oriental Orthodox Churches are composed of six churches: the Coptic Church of Alexandria, the Syriac Church of Antioch, the Armenian Church, the Malankara Syrian Church, the Ethiopian Church, and the Eritrean Church. They consider themselves to be the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church founded by Jesus in his Great Commission, and that its bishops are the successors of Christ's apostles.

Oriental Orthodox Churches shared communion with the Roman Church before the Council of Chalcedon in 451 AD, and with the Church of the East until the Council of Ephesus in AD 431, separating primarily over differences in Christology. The majority of Oriental Orthodox Christians live in Egypt, Ethiopia, Eritrea, India, Syria, Turkey and Armenia, with smaller Syriac communities in Western Asia.

Oriental Orthodoxy shares much theology and many ecclesiastical traditions with the Eastern Orthodox Churches. These include a similar doctrine of salvation and a tradition of collegiality between bishops, as well as reverence of the Theotokos and use of the Nicene Creed. Theotokos refers to the decree of the Council of Ephesus that Mary is Mother of God because her son was both God and Man. The primary theological difference between the two communions is the differing Christology.

Miaphysitism is the Christological doctrine that holds Jesus, the "Incarnate Word, is fully divine and fully human, in one 'nature' (physis). It is a position held by the Oriental Orthodox Churches and differs from the Chalcedonian position that Jesus is one "person" in two "natures," a divine nature and a human nature (Dyophysitism). Miaphysitism teaches that the incarnate Christ has one "nature," but one that is still of both a divine character and a human character and retains all the characteristics of both, with no mingling, confusion (pouring together) or change of either nature.

The break in communion between the Imperial Roman and Oriental Orthodox churches did not occur suddenly, but rather gradually over 2-3 centuries following the Council of Chalcedon. Eventually the two communions developed separate institutions, and the Oriental Orthodox did not participate in any of the later ecumenical councils.

Some Oriental Orthodox Churches such as the Coptic Orthodox, Ethiopian Orthodox, Eritrean Orthodox, place a heavier emphasis on Old Testament teachings than one might find in other Christian denominations, and its followers adhere to certain practices: following dietary rules that are similar to Jewish Kashrut (clearly prescribed ways of preparing foods and of restricting types of foods—pork, e.g.); require that their male members undergo circumcision; and observe ritual purification.

The First Council of Nicaea, in 325, declared that Jesus Christ is God; that is to say, "consubstantial" with the Father. Later, the third ecumenical council, the Council of Ephesus, declared that Jesus Christ, though divine as well as human, is only one being, or person (hypostasis). Thus, the Council of Ephesus explicitly rejected Nestorianism, the Christological doctrine that Christ has two distinct persons, one divine (the Logos) and one human (Jesus), who happened to inhabit the same body. The churches that later became Oriental Orthodoxy were firmly anti-Nestorian, and therefore strongly supported the decisions made at Ephesus.

Twenty years after Ephesus, the Council of Chalcedon reaffirmed the view that Jesus Christ was a single person, but at the same time declared that this one person existed "in two complete natures," one human and one divine. At times, Chalcedonian Christians have referred to the Oriental Orthodox as being monophysites—that is to say, accusing them of following the teachings of Eutyches (c. 380 - c. 456), who argued that Jesus Christ was not human at all, but only divine. Monophysitism was condemned as heretical alongside Nestorianism, and to accuse a church of being monophysite is to accuse it of falling into the opposite extreme from Nestorianism. However, the Oriental Orthodox themselves reject this description as inaccurate, having officially condemned the teachings of both Nestorius and Eutyches. They define themselves as Miaphysite instead, holding that Christ has one nature, but this nature is both human and divine.

Oriental Orthodoxy does not have a magisterial leader (pope) like the Roman Catholic Church, nor does the communion have a leader who can convene ecumenical synods like the Eastern Orthodox Church.

Here's a brief summary of the controversies over Jesus' nature:

- Nestorius: Two persons, one divine (logos), one human in same body.
- Chalcedon/Roman Catholic: One person with two natures.
- Oriental—Miaphysite: One nature, divine and human characters.
- Eutyches—Monophysite: One divine person.
